STRICT FUNERAL REGULATIONS PROVIDED FOR CONTAGIOUS CASES

Local Undertakers Are Advised By State Health Department

STRICT OBSERVANCE REQUIRED

Local undertakers have received instructions from Dr. Edward Martin, State Commissioner of Health, concerning the regulations which must prevail in conducting funerals in the future, particularly where there have been any contagious diseases.

The first regulations concerns the furnishing of certain features in connections with funerals, and provides: From and after the promulgation of this resolution no undertaker, or person or persons acting in the capacity of undertaker, or funeral director, or any other person, shall rent or temporarily furnish for use at a funeral in any private house, any carpet, rug, drapery, clothing or artificial flowers.

The other regulations provides that all services held in connection with the funeral of the body of any person who has died of measles, mumps, German measles, whooping cough and chicken pox shall be private and the attendance thereat shall include only the immediate adult relatives of the deceased, who may at the time not under absolute quarantine restrictions, and the necessary number of adult pallbearers; and any advertisement of such funeral shall state the cause of death.

Further, the body of a person who has died of measles, mumps, German measles, whooping cough and chicken pox shall not be taken in any church, chapel, public hall or public building for the purpose of holding funeral services.

ALL EMPLOYES WILL BE PAID OFF

All of the employes of the Donora Steel Works, the Donora Wire Works, the Donora Zinc Works and the Donora Southern Railroad company will be paid for the last half of September, or for such time as they worked in that period, on Tuesday, September 3th, at 3 o'clock, p. m. At that time the employes will receive all the wages due them for work performed, and merchants and business men of Donora are construing this fact as an indication that the corporation may keep those mills closed down for an indefinite period It is said that many of the former employes of the company would like to return to work, but prefer to remain away from the mills during the present state of unrest. Thursday was a very quiet day in the town, the only incident being the parade of the strikers, which attempted to reach Monessen, but which was turned back before it reached that place.

TO VIEW PREMISES FOR LATERAL RAILROAD

A panel of 18 jurors has been named by the Washington county court from which six are to be chosen to view a proposed lateral railroad over the farm of Charles Williams in East Bethlehem township, near Clarksville. The petitioners are Harry G. Teagarden and J. P. Casper of Punxsutawney, who own a tract of coal in said township and who want access to the same over the Williams' farm.

MONESSEN HAS A VERY QUIET NIGHT

Monessen was very quiet Thursday afternoon and evening, not a single arrest being made by the police. All of the excitement occurred during the morning, when the local Protective League and returned service men went to the borough limits to prevent the strikers of Donora from entering the town. The Monessen contingent halted at what is known as Wildcat hollow, and for a time the foreign women of that community made things very entertaining for them. One woman attempted to throw pepper into the eyes of the police, and one of the force did receive a small portion. The offender was driven into her home and that ended the incident. The women, however, kept up a continual yelling at the police men, but they paid no attention to their cries. The men of that section of the town who are on a strike kept at home and while in view remained silent. Borough authorities are not anticipating any trouble today, although prepared to meet with any emergency that might arise.

Like our unfortunate Presidents, the Prince of Wales feels that he must shake every profered hand lest he be thought "undemocratic." In consequence the Canadians have squeezed his right hand into a state of inflamation and he is now compelled to shake with his left.

Mrs. W. H. Spencer of Charleroi, who has been quite ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. B. Goodlin, of Toronto, Ohio, was removed to the Mercy hospital at Pittsburg on Wednesday for treatment.

Notice.

A meeting of Charleroi Civic League will be held Friday evening September 26, at 8 o'clock in Masonic Banquet Hall, corner Fifth Street, and McKean avenue. You are earnestly requested to attend. Important business will be brought before the organization.

By order of Chairman.

Passenger Coaches Have Been Returned To Home Railroads

"The chickens are coming home to roost," remarked a passenger department railroad official in Pittsburg on Thursday. He referred to the home-coming of passenger coach equipment that belonged in the Pittsburg district, but which has been missing for a year or more.

When the war department, during war times, wanted coaches to move troops, it called upon the railroad administration for this equipment. The best coaches from all the railroads were pressed into this service, and they have been in it for many months. Now that troop movements are practically ended passenger cars are being sent to the home road. As many as a dozen cars are reaching Pittsburg, where they belong, every day.

The old coaches which the railroad administration sent into the Pittsburg district during the street car strike, and many of which were in use on the Monongahela Division, have disappeared. They were gathered from all railroads in the United States. The removal of this equipment and the return of the home cars is welcomed here, for railroads in this district own the best cars in the country.

Local trains in the valley are now equipped with the standard steel coaches, a fact greatly appreciated by the traveling public.

BURGESS WILL ENFORCE THE LAW

The Burgess of Donora has issued a proclamation calling attention of the people, and particularly of the foreign element to certain state laws with reference to the carrying of concealed weapons. The Burgess makes it plain that any alien found with firearms in his possession will be dealt with to the full extent of the law. He asks parents to keep their children from playing on the streets, and requests that all citizens remain away from any point where disorder is threatened. Donora, like Monessen, was very quiet Thursday afternoon and evening, the visit of the state police after the parade apparently having had a sobering effect on any of those who might have favored starting any trouble.

POSTPONE DATE OF CELEBRATION

The celebraion which was to have been held in Donora from the 9th to the 12th of October in honor of the home coming of service men has been postponed until a later date The general committee, in view of present conditions, particularly because of the shutdown of the Donora mills, does not believe the present time opportune to have the celebration, and dates will be announced later. At present all meetings of every kind is under the ban in Donora, and the committee deemed it inadvisable to hold the celebration and the street carnival at this time.

BLAME PLACED ON HUSBAND FOR DEATH

An inquest was held in West Brownsville by Coroner Heffran, to inquire into the death of Sophia Birach, who was shot and fatally wounded by her husband, Tomo Birach, in West Brownsville several weeks ago. The woman died in a Pittsburg hospital about the 8th of September. The coroner found death due to a gunshot wound inflicted by the husband. The husband made his escape immediately after the shooting, and has not yet been apprehended. It was brought out in the evidence, given by the father of the woman, that the husband was probably disappointed in that he thought his wife was to get some money from her father, after she was married.

COMPLETE POTATO STUDY IN EUROPE

Dr. J. G. Sanders, director of the State Bureau of Plant Industry, returned on Thursday from Europe, where he made a study of the potato wart disease and will make an extended report upon the situation in Great Britain and Ireland, where efforts to secure a potatoe that will be immune have been made. He declared it is a wise step that a quarantine was placed upon potatoes from Europe.

Representatives from the State Bureau of Plant Industry were in this section of the Monongahela valley several weeks ago, with a view of ascertaining if the disease had found a lodgement in the valley. Their reports will be made to the state officials, and if any evidence of the trouble was discovered steps will be taken to eradicate it.

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES CAN PROFIT BY OFFER FROM STATE

Can Secure State Competitive Scholarships By New Law

COLLEGE OR UNIVERSITY COURSE

Superintendent Pollock is in receipt of a communication from Thomas E. Finegan, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, with reference to a certain law passed by the last legislature.

This act, (No. 417) establishes competitive state scholarships to aid young men and women in obtaining a higher education. The main provisions of the act are:

Graduates of a four-year high school course may compete for a scholarship.

The person receiving a scholarship may enter any college or university approved by the College and University Council and while in attendance upon such college will receive one hundred dollars per year for four years to aid in meeting college expenses.

Each county is entitled to one scholarship, or for each senatorial district, if more than one in the county.

Competitive examination must be held under direction of state board.

After the current year all examinations will be held in June in all high schools before they have closed. Examinations for this year will be held Saturday, October 11 at all the colleges and universities and at the state normal schools.

This will bring the examinations within an accessible distance of every person in the state who may desire to take it.

Any of the graduates of the high school class of 1919 who may wish to take the examination may obtain additional data from Prof. Pollock, who will be pleased to furnish it to any who may desire to secure it.

SAYS DEFENDANT HAS VIOLATED LEASE

Charles G. Gennaula, of Charleroi, has filed a suit in the Washington county courts, against Ben Itzkovitz also of Charleroi, to secure possession of a certain property at 728 Fallowfield avenue. The claim is based on a certain article of agreement, where the plaintiff leased this property as a storeroom, to the defendant for a term of five years. A condition of the lease was, it is set forth, that the lessee was not to assign the same without the consent of the lessor. It is averred the defendant has violated this condition and that under the terms of the lease has forfeited his right to the possession of the property.

NEVADA AS "GOLDEN STATE"

From Reports, It Is Not at All Improbable She May Become Thus Known.

When they began to dig out silver by the ton from the Comstock group of mines, Nevada lost its original name of "the Sagebrush State," and became known to the whole world as the "Silver State."

But recent developments in the Divide district seem to indicate another change of name, for they do say that the gold is so thick just a little under the surface that the owners of the mines refuse to dig lest they be ruined by the excess profits tax. They just take out a shovelful from time to time to pay living expenses, and sit right over the hole where they took it out till they need a little more. Possibly, also, these mine owners are influenced by patriotism, as not wishing to disturb values by flooding the world with gold and thus adding to the economic confusion. California has hitherto taken pride in calling itself the Golden state, but even in Nevada they are getting ready to demand the belt and title and say they are going to get it.

And with all due allowance for newborn enthusiasm and for the picturesque way in which prosperous miners are wont to express themselves, if a tenth of what is claimed is true—and it may be—we may expect the people of Nevada to change from the most loyal of silverites to the most determined and irreconcilable gold bugs. Circumstances do alter cases. That they have found a lot of gold is certain.—Sioux Falls Press.

I was expecting a call on the telephone from my wife at eleven o'clock one morning. Exactly at that hour my bell jingled, and, taking down the receiver, I said: "Hello!"

The response came: "Is that you, White?"

"This is your honey, sweetheart," was my reply.

In icy tones came: "You've got your nerve. Wait till I see your wife."

Bang went the receiver.

I recognized the voice as that of my wife's chum.—Chicago Tribune.

Lithuanian Exports.

Lithuania is shaking off the grip of German economic control. First of its products to be freed will be its lumber, which Germany controlled to her own great profit.

Lithuania exported about 300,000,000 cubic feet of timber annually through the port of Memel by the River Niemen. Germany's control of the Niemen river has been ended.

Lithuania will therefore come forward as a world trader as soon as her independence is recognized. She is already planning the purchase of metal, machinery and foodstuffs in America.

Wheat in History.

The Romans introduced wheat into Great Britain. They did not have to carry it far, because before they invaded Britain they had conquered Gaul, the France of modern times, and the Gauls were growing large crops of wheat when the Romans crossed to the western islands. The Britons began to grow wheat, and the Saxons continued the work. Still, through the Middle ages the bread of the poorer classes was made of flour from the coarser grains.

To Be of Influence.

If you can't swing things your way in life the sensible thing is to swing with things the way they are going. To be sure you can just abruptly cut away, but that leaves you out of touch with things. It may be a relief to your conscience to be beyond the reach of compromise. But you are also beyond the reach of influence. You can not hope to be able to mold character or even contribute anything toward bending it.

Use Life's Powers Properly.

There is no wealth but life; life, including all its powers of love, of joy and of admiration. That country is the richest which nourishes the greatest number of noble and happy human beings: that man is the richest who, having perfected the functions of his own life to the utmost, has also the widest helpful influence, both personal and by means of his possessions, over the lives of others.—Ruskin.

Opposed Brothers' Church.

There were three of the Wesleys, although only two of them had anything to do with founding the Methodist church. Sons of an English clergyman, and well educated, they were all pious men, but the older brother, Samuel, took no stock in "Methodism." In fact, he combated it, and wrote of it upon one occasion as "a spreading delusion."

Life Not All Chance.

Events are shapeless except as personality shapes them. Birth and death and changing fortunes are common to humanity, but what different individuals make of them is a forever varying story. We cannot know what experiences await us, but may know tolerably well, by what we are making of ourselves, how we shall pass through them.

Saved in Nick of Time.

Many wonderful bargains are recorded in connection with old books. The priceless Coverdale Bible in the British Museum library, for instance, was bought by an amateur book collector from a butcher who was delighted and astonished on being offered ten shillings for it. He was about to use its valuable leaves to wrap up his meat.

WHEN AVIATION WAS NEW

Benjamin Franklin Evidently Had Expectations of Its Value, Though Venturing No Predictions.

Somebody has been quite naturally reminded, by events in the air, of what Benjamin Franklin said to Condorcet about aeronautics 136 years ago, in Paris. The French capital was just then much interested in the balloon ascensions of the Montgolfier brothers, perhaps even more excited, on the smaller scale of the times, than modern cities over the actual crossing of the Atlantic, and wherever men came together the future possibilities of ballooning made an immediate topic of conversation. Condorcet, meeting Franklin, asked him if he thought an aeronaut would ever be able to steer his balloon. "The thing is in its infancy," said Franklin. "It is necessary to wait." "But what is the good of it?" demanded a doubting Thomas. "What useful purpose will it serve?" "Gentlemen," replied Franklin, "it is a child just born; let us wait to judge it until its education is completed." And even now the education is far from finished.

Floor Bleach.

If an unfilled or undressed hardwood floor becomes gray apply a solution of two ounces of oxalic acid dissolved in just enough water to wet it well all over. Let stand fifteen or twenty minutes; then rinse in cold water and proceed to wash without suds as usual.

Confidential Communication.

"I promised Matilda not to mention this to anyone, because she got it in strictest confidence from some one who was pledged to absolute secrecy, so before I tell you you must give me your word of honor you won't even breathe a hint of it."

First Translation of Bible.

The first translation of any part of the Bible was that by Bede of the Fourth Gospel, in 735. The first complete translation was that of Wycliffe about 1388. Luther was not born until 1483.

Something to Think About.

"I reckons," said Uncle Eben, "dat a candidate has to be right keerful not to let de handshakin' sociability git to be so much of a habit dat it interferes wif his office work when he gits de job."

New Labor Saver.

An inventor has patented an electrically driven machine which makes the rough clay boxes in which pottery is subjected to heat in kilns, work heretofore done by hand.

Excels the Nightingale.

The hermit thrush is declared to be the most talented and brilliant singer in the world, not even excepting the nightingale, says the American Forestry association. The tail of this little bird is of a reddish brown, much brighter than the back and head, while the breast is quite heavily spotted with black. It winters in the Gulf states.

The Sea.

Shakespeare tells us there is a tide in the affairs of men. Certainly there is a tide in the minds of men. He must be very unobservant of himself who does not know that the mind rises and falls, that it swells into fullness and strength and then fades into emotions and weakness. We know not how, we know not why.—Theophilus Parsons.

Little Helen's Idea.

Helen had a good imagination. One day, when playing blind man's buff, she was seen crawling on all fours. The "blind man" stumbled over her and when she uncovered her eyes and asked why Helen was down on her knees, Helen replied: "I thought you would think it was a dog."

Grease on Wallpaper.

To remove grease spots from wallpaper, sprinkle a piece of blotting paper with carbonate of soda and press it against the wall with a moderately hot iron. The blotting paper will absorb the grease, while the soda preserves the color of the paper.

Punishment.

The whole of life and experience goes to show, that right or wrong doing, whether as to the physical or the spiritual nature, is sure in the end to meet its appropriate reward or punishment. Penalties may be delayed, but they are sure to come.

Have Points in Common.

It is the general understanding that there are all kinds of people in the world, but at times we get the notion that they are all exactly alike, at that.—Wilmington News.

Were All There.

"It wasn't fair to mark me down on that word in spelling," said Jane as she came in from school. "I had all its letters in but I didn't arrange them right."

One's Too Many Sometimes.

"If we had two heads," remarked the man on the car, "we'd have more trouble getting them to track than we have with our feet."—Toledo Blade.

Optimistic Thought.

A common armchair is a more comfortable seat than a throne.

Outspoken Athenian.

More than twenty-three hundred years ago a young Athenian, speaking of his wife, said to Socrates: "When I saw that she had powder on her face to make it whiter and rouge to make it redder, and that she wore high-heeled shoes to appear taller, I told her it was as dishonorable for her to try to deceive me about her beauty as for me to try to deceive her about my property. I added that, although her arts might impose upon others, they could not impose upon me, who saw her at all times."—Youth's Companion.

Jolly Little Chipmunk.

The place the chipmunk fills is small and inconsequent but his sylvan "chirrup" plays a minor strain in the wordless diapason which the mighty blue soul of nature is forever singing in her forests; solemn and consoling to heal earth's scars; jubilant and glad for the free of heart. Intonating ever some clear sweet note of mystic melody for those who listen, to awaken a dreaming bliss or to thrill an untried fiber into quivering life.

Peruvian Flower Festival.

Peru celebrates a custom which dates from soon after the Spanish conquest. All soldiers' graves alike are decorated, including those of peons and Indians, individuals little regarded in Peru, at all events during life. In the evening the populace gives itself over to feasting and merrymaking. This particular flower festival is held annually on November 1.

Satisfaction in Doing Right.

Imagination is the father and mother of trouble when we let it run loose in a time of stress. But in the end the will and the heart are what determine our fate. After all, when we do right we have some satisfaction even if we suffer. But if we do nothing but drift along we have not even the satisfaction of knowing we deserve to come out right.

The date of the battle of Salamanca was Sunday, July 2, 1812; Vimiero, Feuntes d'Onor, Orthez, Toulouse and Vittoria were also contested on what were known as "Wellington's Red Sundays." Waterloo was won on a Sunday and the greatest attack on Cronje's trenches at Paardeberg was made on a Sunday—Feb. 18, 1900.

Waiting in Agony.

At a recent wedding the bride was delayed a little in making her appearance. When at last she did appear she breathlessly ran up to the embarrassed bridegroom, who had been waiting for her in agony and putting her arms around his neck exclaimed: "Oh, John, dear, I am so sorry I am late."

I cannot praise your Vegetable Compound too highly, and you may publish my testimonial as it may be the means of helping some other suffering woman."—Mrs. IRENE KING, 105 West Campbell Street, Iola, Kansas.

MALEKULANS NOT ALL BAD

Pugnacious South Pacific Islanders Scrupulously Honest, Though Careless of Human Life.

The sending of a small naval force to Malekula island, in the New Hebrides, for the protection of planters against the natives brings some incidental information about a peculiar people with the undesirable fame of being the most bellicose inhabitants of any island in the South Pacific. Malekula island has long been under the joint control of France and England, and at intervals some display of force has been necessary to make the islanders respect the local representatives of a more advanced civilization. Despite their reputation for pugnacity, however, there is much, declares a recent writer, to be said for the Malekulans. For one thing, they are remarkably honest; the traveler who goes among them knows that however he may fare as regards personal safety, he is in no danger whatever of losing his personal property. And if he is careful not to irritate his hosts, he is likely to come away with a pleasant memory of the native village community, its discussions of community affairs in a kind of village forum, its dances, and its children's playground under the banyan tree. He learns also that many of the villages have a social club for men and that the islander, who is also a crack marksman with bow and arrow, takes great satisfaction in belonging to it.

JUST MISSED SEEING FATHER

Little Incident Reported From France Shows That Political Trickery Is Not Unknown There.

When it comes to the matter of political trickery, modern nations one and all seem to be pretty well tarred with the same brush. The following incident retold with a flavor of Gallic irony by the Cri de Paris is said to have taken place in Toulouse.

On election day a young man came to a booth to vote.

"But, monsieur," said one of the overseers, "you have already voted."

"I? Allos donc! I am certain that I have not."

A search being made of the records, it is discovered that there has been an error in the recording of the Christian name. It is not Marius Tartarin that has voted but Gonzague Tartarin.

"Gonzague!" cried the young man; "you are quite sure that he has voted?"

"Yes, indeed! Look, here is the register."

"Ah, how I regret not having been here," said the young man. "I would have embraced him with much pleasure. He is my father."

"Your father?"

"Yes, and I have not seen him since he died, four years ago."—The Living Age.

A "Geeneral Sattlement."

In the rich spoil that the Hapsburgs accumulated over many centuries much of which is coming back to the nations that owned it, there is hardly a more interesting item than the coronation robes that Italy now proposes to have returned to Palermo. Sicily. Henry VI, emperor of the Holy Roman empire in the twelfth century, subdued the Sicilies and took back to Germany the gorgeous costume that Saracen artisans had made for Norman kings who had come into control a hundred years earlier. Since then the robes have been worn by Hapsburg monarchs at their coronations, and of late years they have been kept, between these ceremonial occasions, in the Imperial treasury in Hofburg. Vienna. The robes include a magnificent mantle, a wonderfully embroidered alb or long gown of fine linen, and a girdle of gold scales. As between Austria and Italy, it certainly looks like what Weelum Sprunt would have called a "geeneral sattlement."

A Fellow Feeling.

"I saw an ant on the window sill of my room on the seventh floor of the hotel where I stopped in Kansas City," related Gabe Gosnell of Grudge, who was just back from a brief stay in the Big Burg. "I looked at him a long time, and says I: 'Little feller, I don't know how you got here, away up in the air above the ground you are used to, but you don't look any more out of place than I feel, with all the citified rush and hurry and uproar going on around me day and night, in a never-ending hooraw,' says I."—Kansas City Star.

Four great mountain roads are to be relaid and rebuilt in the upper Vosges, leading from France into Alsace.

The Commission des Routes of the district of the Vosges is looking to the near future when tourists will pass that way. Largely the roads existed as strategic military mountain roads and the present effort is in line with making them available for pleasure automobiles. Taken together they will form a new approachable circuit and entrance into upper Alsace.

Science Can Overcome Locust.

Fruit trees are always the special objectives of the locusts when they sound the rallying cry, and when thorough preparations are not made against their coming they can leave a trail of ruin in the wake of their flight; but the science of the day is almost a match for the pest, and no such havoc can attend his attack as he achieved in the earliest days of his destructive history.

HOLY GRAIL MERELY LEGEND

Green Crystal Vase Found by Baldwin I in Ruins of Cesarea Is Only So Called.

Few places are more absolutely cities of the past than Cesarea. Some one has spoken of the remains of its ancient glory as the "rum of ruins." The medieval town which was twice rebuilt by the Crusaders covered scarcely a tenth of the area occupied by the city as St. Paul knew it, and the ruins that we see today are chiefly the relics of the medieval city, which was itself built out of the ruins of the ancient city.

What a rich quarry Cesarea has been for other city builders is shown by the fact that, though it has been drawn upon for all these centuries for marble and granite and sandstone, it is not yet absolutely exhausted, but still affords building material for the peasants of the vicinity.

The green crystal vase which was found here when Baldwin I, the great Crusader, captured the city at the beginning of the twelfth century, says the Christian Herald, gave rise to the story of the Holy Grail, which has inspired so many legends and poems, for Baldwin and his followers believed that it was the one that was used at the Last Supper by our Lord, when he gave his disciples the cup of wine and said: "Drink ye all of it; this do in remembrance of me."

NIGHT'S BEAUTY IS HIDDEN

Few Artists Have Been Given the Ability to Depict Its Proper Glory and Majesty.

One of the perpetual regrets of painters is the unattainable beauty of night. Whistler's successful Nocturnes are of early twilight.

The later hour, when the world's vast shadow weighs on us, seems unrealizable in paint.

Even Crome, perhaps the greatest master of nightfall pictures, could not go beyond the twilight.

The perfect medium for darkness was discovered by Turner, whose set of engraved Moonlights are among the most precious works that man has made.

There are but about a dozen engraved and printed by the master. They so far transcend his colored drawings, from which they were derived, as to prove that black and white can conjure up the spirit of night more potently than color.

But they are not ordinary mezzotints; they are creative rather than reproductive; no one but Turner could have done them, nor could he have communicated their secret to his engravers.

New Ears for New Music.

Few laymen appreciate to what an extent musical esthetics is a matter of psychology. We ordinarily assume that music "expresses" by some divine charm, that the composer who sighs of love has "discovered" the proper musical statement of love's emotion. But musical materials are not discovered, they are manufactured. It is by habit and repetition not by intuition, that we come to accept chords of dissonance. The major and minor third of the old music is very sweet because it is very familiar. The new bald colors of futurist music are ugly because they are strange. Our ears contain little formulas, so to speak, for the chords and scales that have been ground into our consciousness by frequent hearings. When we hear a new piece of music it must agree with them to some degree, else we feel uncomfortable. Now, these formulas, though they thrive on variation, hate negation. So if the new music negates them entirely, as futurist music does, there is no entente possible. Our ears will not serve our purpose. We must become familiar with the new style.—The New Republic.

Garden Plants in History.

Which is the oldest flower in our gardens? The question was raised over our dahlia blooms, which like the fuchsia, come originally from Mexico. The first plants to appear here were grown at Holland house from seed sent home by Lady Holland from Spain in 1879. In the previous year Sir Joseph Banks introduced the hydrangea. The fuchsia had then been known among us already for close on a century. A further turning up of authorities discovered that the tulip (from the Levant) was introduced about 1560, about which time, by the way, the horse chestnut reached us from Asia and the lilac from Persia. Some forty years before that had come the damask rose, simultaneously, among the trees, with the larch. The oldest claimant with a recorded date seemed to be the crocus. It arrived from the far East in 1339.—London Chronicle.

Then and Now.

The great amphitheaters of Rome were in reality theater structures, hence their circular or semicircular form. The largest of all the ancient amphitheaters, the Colosseum of Rome, had outside dimensions of 510 by 615 feet, with inside dimensions of 177 by 281 feet, while the great structure at Pompeii is 342 by 444 feet outside and 115 by 218 feet inside. The new amphitheater at Yale university occupies a field of 25 acres, the outside dimensions of the structure being 750 by 950 feet and the playing field within 300 by 500 feet. At Pompeii the seating capacity was 20,000; the Colosseum could seat 50,000 in its four-story tiers, while the Yale structure seats 61,000.

INDUSTRIAL SLACKERS

When this country was building up and becoming great industrially the sentiment at the bottom of all effort, the spur to achievement, was that the more work done the greater would be the reward. Continuing toil, with a view to higher wages or a larger pecuniary return, was what brought fortunes to the few, comfortable living conditions to the many, and the country's marvelous upbuilding. Now all this is changed. In these days the industrial slogan, particularly in that great section of the body politic known as "labor," is less work and more pay. The sound formula of the earlier times—more work for more pay— is completely reversed, regardless of the fact that the impossible is demanded. Impossible, of course, for only temporarily and through artificial arrangements with no enduring basis can more pay be given for less work.

This is true at all times and it was never so true as now, now that the imperative need of America as well as of Europe is increased production. Increased production is imperative because the war so vastly decreased production through the slaughter of seven million producers, the incapacitation of millions more, and the destruction of billions of dollars worth of property, including stored food, which must be replaced. Yet at such a time "labor" cuts down its work hours and demands more pay. This is chiefly what is the matter at the present time in both America and England: and all attempts to explain, and provide remedies for, the economic crisis which do not take this grave matter into account will necessarily fail. If the Americans and the British are determined to turn their backs on the sound old system of more pay for more work, and substitute the impossible system of more pay for less work, they must and will pay the inescapable penalty. They are paying it to the full already in unbearable high living costs and they are beginning to pay it in the matter of foreign competition which it is impossible for them to meet.

Already the alarm is sounded in London that Germany is underselling Britain even in its own home markets. The same alarm will be sounded in America just as soon as official peace fully opens our currents of trade with Germany. But how can war-burdened, crippled Germany, with an enormous indemnity to pay, manage to do this wonderful thing? The simple and obvious answer is hard work. The Germans indulge in no illusions, knowing that they can achieve their industrial redemption only by ceaseless toil. They know that they must bend their backs to hard labor and they are doing it, without wasting a thought on the vain imagination that the mere fiat of an industrial organization can procure more pay for less work. As a part of their crafty scheme, they send agents to help forward this fool-dreamer's demand in America and England, but they will have none of it themselves. It has been the fashion of late to call them stupid, but they have the wit to know that if they remain a nation of hard workers they can readily capture the trade of every nation of indulent industrial slackers.

THE OPERATION

Individuals who can expect to pass St. Peter's inspection at the gates of Paradise in possession of all the bodily organs bestowed upon them at birth are becoming scarce. It is passing strange what a number of supernumerary organs the human frame has developed during its development from the primal animal—if one accepts the theory of man's origin.

The scriptural injunction, "If thine eye offend thee pluck it out," is obeyed with remarkable literalness when applied to other parts of the anatomy. For a long time "the operation" was an index of social and financial standing and supplied the chief topic of conversation on hotel piazzas and at seaside resorts. There seemed to be a mutuality in suffering—or a curiosity as to details—that broke down barriers of social caste. Or is it that we all enjoy talking about ourselves?

Appendicitis came into vogue, re-

[illegible] the pleben at last and only one [illegible] of ills, [illegible] and fashionable [illegible] and [illegible] nerve. It has [illegible] the list of fashionable [illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] since most [illegible] by accidental [illegible] became really popular. At present the tonsils, as a fruitful source of mischief's myriad ills, supply the need for something to "operate" upon. Medical science must some day [illegible] these superfluous and "dangerous" appendages have a little meaning all their own," [illegible] some world benefactor will devise something to replace them artificially.

PARIS TRIPS COSTLY.

The expenses of the American Peace Commission in Paris from December 1, 1918, to December 31, 1919, are estimated by President Wilson at $1,506,776. Of this the expenditure of 686,146 has been reported. He also asks Congress to appropriate $27,000 to cover the probable expenses to the end of this year. The secretary of state had, at first, at President Wilson's request, submitted a request for $5,000,000. Congress, reluctant to appropriate so large a sum, took no action on Mr. Lansing's request. Notwithstanding the war came to an end November 11, 1918, it seems that the treaties of peace with Austria, Turkey and Bulgaria are yet to be made.

Mr. Wilson states that he at first took over to Paris thirteen hundred persons. After his return the number was cut to four hundred persons. The American public may not know much about peace making, but it will have a very strong suspicion that 1,300 persons would come nearer to muddling peace than to making it. Subconsciously the thought will form that a great many sight seers, curiosity hunters, sycophants and parasites managed to entrance themselves in the 1300 for the people to pay for. They may have had nominal assignments, but practically they were taken there to see the "big show" at the government's expense. It is understood that the sums expended do not include the expenses of the steamer George Washington, the cable tolls, which were enormous, and the salaries of army and navy officers and other government employes. The public will read with interest that the rent of the Hotel Crillon, amounting to $245,000, is to be paid out of another fund. Its employes were paid $53,000. For food and hotel supplies $128,000 were expended. Linen and laundry came to $31,500. Automobiles cost $14,000. The President in his message assures Congress that the expenses have been and are very modest. Upon that there will be a difference of opinion. The hard headed taxpayers and buyers of Liberty Bonds will hold a different opinion. They will believe that there was no necessity for 1,300 in the President's entourage. They will believe that many of the thirteen hundred were presented with a junket trip in effect.

If this is a fair sample of what Mr. Wilson regards as a modest expenditure, and if it is a fair criterion of what the expenses of the league of nation's headquarters are to be, verily the days of Jeffersonian simplicity are in the discard. There is a great gulf fixed between Jeffersonian simplicity and Wilson modesty.

Of course Congress will have to appropriate the money. The people will have to pay it. Idealism comes high, but we have to have it until March 4,1921.

SCHOOL TEACHER NEEDED BRAINS

"I never have had such a "God-send' come to me as when I took the first dose of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy I was afraid I would have to give up my school because of severe stomach, liver and bowel trouble which caused such a pressure of gas that I could not use my brain at times, and my heart would palpitate awfully. Since taking a treatment of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy a year ago, all this has disappeared." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. At druggists everywhere.

SAYS HIS STOMACH WAS IN BAD SHAPE

Give your stomach a chance to [illegible] and help it so that you [illegible] the feeling of real health—again have that vim, energy and vigor, clean tongue, sweet breath, good complexion and be able to sleep the night through and eat the food you crave without fear of the consequences.

The new herbal remedy for the stomach, Plant Juice, recently introduced here, will assist that much-abused organ, the stomach, to accomplish these results.

Many well known people have testified that they have regained their health through the use of this famous remedy, and are glad to make statements in signed testimonials. One of the most recent is that of Mr. William Fortenbacher, who lives at the William Penn Hotel, and has a wide acquaintance here. He said:

"For some time my stomach was in a terrible condition and I would have bad vomiting spells; I could not keep the lightest kind of food down and could not get any sleep at night; I got so weak and run down that I was awfully discouraged, as I had tried different medicines without any benefit whatever I was also under treatment, but got no results from it. After this had failed, I decided as a last resort, to give Plant Juice a trial, although I had little faith in it helping me. I can now truthfully say that Plant Juice cured me of the weak spells I had and put my stomach in fine condition. It has built me up in every way. I can honestly recommend Plant Juice."

Plant Juice is sold in Charleroi at Henning's Drug Store.

TRIP TO GLASS CASKET PLANT AN EDUCATION

Handicapped by War and Material Shortage, Plant Only Now Nearing Completion

FURNACE IS A REVELATION

Expecting to find a mere brick shell representing the plant of the Glass Casket corporation, several members of the Tribune force were personally conducted through the plant yesterday afternoon by representatives of the company, and instead of finding it as they expected they came away feeling that they had received an unlooked for education and that they had caught at least a part of the spirit of success and vigor with which working members of the corporation are imbued.

The plant far from being an embryo one, is so far advanced now that the workers are beginning to see the light of completion looming ahead and fully expect, should material shortage not prove an unexpected obstacle, to be turning out completed caskets before the Christmas season.

Furnace Largest of Its Kind

The glass furnace, which will take the raw material, sand lime and soda ash, the mixture being known as "cullet" together with other chemicals used to convert the green glass into the color and transparency desired, and produce it ready for the casket molds, will, when completed, be the very largest type of flint glass furnace which is practical in this country. It will have a capacity of 240 tons, a melting capacity of 42 tons every 24 hours and is of the type known as regenerator.

The foundation for the furnace, together with the system of air and gas conduits by which it will be heated, has already been completed, and workmen are now engaged in laying the bottom of "tank" or flux blocks. These blocks cover the entire floor of the furnace and extend up the side for a distance of four feet. The blocks are laid flush to each other without the use of mortar of any kind and will have to be renewed every seven years.

Contrary to popular belief, glass furnaces are not heated by means of a fire from below. Instead, in the Glass Casket company's furnace, the heat will be furnished by means of the combustion of coal gas coming in contact with air heated to a very high temperature, and this combustion will take place over the glass batch.

By means of a plant outside known as the producer, the gas will be manufactured by means of the burning of coal in the presence of steam, in much the same manner that commercial gas is produced. It will then be led inside and will enter the gas chamber, there being two of these—one on each side of the furnace. Beside the gas chamber is the air chamber where, by means of a system of arches resembling the grates of a firebox and known as "checkers," the air will be heated to a very high temperature. The air and gas conduits meet just inside the furnace chamber and there is immediate combustion. This swirling fire floating about over the glass batch causes it to melt, as the temperature in the furnaces will range between 2,200 and 2,700 degrees Fahrenheit.

As the batch changes into molten glass it sinks to the bottom, the unmelted part remaining on top. Vents at the bottom will allow the molten glass to be drawn off, ready for the molds. Then more of the raw glass batch can be added at the top and thus the refining continues perpetually. The burning gas and air mixture will be changed from one set of chamber to the other on each side of the furnace every twenty minutes, thus keeping the "checkers" heated and keeping up the temperature necessary for the combustion.

At the bottom of the furnace will be the casket molding machinery, which will press out the casket boxes and the lids each in a single piece It will take thirty seconds to mold a glass casket, ten seconds to deliver the glass to the mold, ten seconds to press and ten seconds to deliver the casket from the mold.

Bread Baking System Followed.

The molded casket, still very hot, next enters the lehr for annealing The lehr in many respects resembles the old fashioned baking oven. At the end where the casket enters there is a firebox. The casket is placed on an endless chain run by an electric motor and slowly passes through a chamber about eighty feet long, away from the flames but subject to the heat, which gradually lessens as the casket approaches the opposite end. The entire trip from one end of the lehr to the other takes about three hours and the casket comes out cool enough to be handled and thoroughly annealed.

It is then sent to the trimming room, where the trimming will be installed. The casket trimming or upholstery is not put on the outside like the present method in regard to wooden caskets, but is put on the inside, the outside thus remaining smooth glass

The casket then goes to the metal room, where the carrier and metal frames by which the lid will be hinged to the main body will then be put on and the casket is then completed.

Two Weeks to Heat Over.

Experts at the plant yesterday stated that when the furnace is completed and ready for use it will first have to be heated before the first batch of "cullet" can be put in. This preliminary heating will require about two weeks before the primary temperature has been reached. The raw material will then be put in gradually and by the time the furnace is filled up to capacity the first of the glass will be ready for the molds and from that time on the work will go on day and night

The completed plant will consist of the furnace room, 100 by 65 feet in dimensions, the lehr room, 80 by 35 feet in dimensions, the trimming room, 130 by 50 feet, the mixing room, 100 by 50 feet, the gas producer, 57 by 32, and automatic throughout, and a metal room and numerous warehouses yet to be built together with a stack 125 feet in height to carry off the combustion residue from the glass furnace. Work is at present under way on a railroad spur leading up to the mixing room and another will be built leading to the warehouses, so that the finished stock can be shipped to the market.

Walter J. Lumbleau, newly appointed fiscal agent of the corporation and formerly with the Modern Glass company, of Toledo, O., took charge locally on July 15, and with him in the field and S. W. Manning looking after affairs in this city, the plant is gradually nearing final completion. Stock in the corporation, which at first sold at $10 per share, has already risen to $15 per share, now that the buildings have finally become concrete and not mere architects' plans.

BLUBBER A DELICIOUS VIAND

Said to Be of Immensely Pleasant Taste, When Eaten Raw From the Seal.

It has always been a mystery to me why the word "blubber" should carry such a disagreeable connotation to millions of people, though not one in a million has ever tasted it, writes Vilhjalmur Stefansson in Harper's.

I am often asked what seal meat tastes like and am driven to saying that it tastes like seal meat, for it does not resemble any commonly known type of meat. But neither does mutton resemble any meat known to me, and still mutton is good eating, and so is seal. But the fat is much easier to describe. When the blubber is eaten raw, as we commonly eat it by preference, it has a flavor very similar to that of fresh cow's cream, but when boiled it closely resembles the fat of mutton. For that reason Mr. Wilkins, who came from the sheep district of Australia, was that member of our whole expedition who most readily fell into the eating of the seal fat.

In general most men refrain from tasting blubber because it is named blubber, until they become so fat hungry that they are eventually driven to trying it, and when they try it, to their surprise they invariably find it so delicious that, if not restrained, they overeat and, as is well known, overeating any form of fat causes nausea and other distressing symptoms. After one or two experiences of this sort I am now careful never to allow a man to eat all the blubber he wants the first time he tries it, for if he gets sick he is almost certain to blame the seal and not his own gluttony.

NEED NOT TRANSFER GERMS

Disease Will Not Be Transmitted if Soiled Hands Are Kept Away From Mouth.

It is glaringly obvious that the biting of finger nails, the moistening of fingers in turning the pages of a book, and similar half-conscious acts greatly enhance the opportunities for planting undesirable germs where they can multiply," says the Journal of the American Medical Association. "On the fingers they may be harmless; transferred to the mouth they have a wide field for development.

"The soiling of the hands is impossible to avoid altogether, but the swallowing of germs from one's own soiled hands is largely under individual control.

"It may fairly be assumed that the most useful safeguards against this form of disease transmission are to be found in such practices as hand washing and in refraining from using the tongue or the lips as a moistening pad, rather than in hysterical attempts at avoidance of all hand contamination. Children are best protected through the inculcation of similar desirable habits at an early age. In a word, some degree of hand-contamination is unavoidable; but the transference of the contaminating germs to the mouth is largely under individual control and is subject to the powerful influence of early-formed habit."

First in the Field.

The mild surprise with which one occasionally notes the name of a foreign city on a penny box of matches purchased in the United States may before long include boxes of matches bearing the far-away name of Dairen, Manchuria. The world's appetite for matches is apparently insatiable. An American company has been studying Manchuria and Siberia from the match manufacturing point of view, but so has a large Japanese concern, and this concern, it now seems, will be first in the field at Dairen, the chief Manchurian port. But then if Japan were not first in the field in Manchuria, where would she be first in the field?

Dodging Shop.

They struck up a conversation in the hotel lobby and finally one man suggested a trip to the movies. The other politely declined.

"Don't you want to see Viola Vampire?"

"Nope."

"Nor Yorick Hamm in his latest comedy?"

"Nope."

"What's the matter, my friend? Aren't you interested in the various stars?"

"Not this evening. I'm an astronomer taking a night off."

Blank had had a day off, and when he returned to the office the following morning his pals wanted to know why he looked so disgruntled.

"Everything went wrong!" grumbled Blank.

"How was that?" one asked.

"Ever go fishing with a girl?"

"Once."

"Did she protest against hurting the fish?"

"No. She said she was sure they were perfectly happy, because they were all wagging their tails."—London Tit-Bits.

One at a Time.

We attended a country wedding and at the conclusion of the ceremony were astonished to see the bride start on the honeymoon alone. When asked the reason the bridegroom explained that both couldn't be away at the same time as there would be no one to feed the stock and he would take his trip down the river shooting ducks when the bride came back.—Chicago Tribune.

Water and the Human Body.

The specific gravity of water and the human body is nearly the same. A body of any size is supported by equal pressure at all points. It is more likely to be at ease and under other circumstances. It is therefore, more likely that it may move without [illegible]. So [illegible] often given, that one does not in the water.

No Race Suicide There.

Jean who had always lived in the city, was going to the country for the summer. As she sat gazing out of the car window a flock of blackbirds, frightened by the train, rose from the ground and flew away. "O, aunty," exclaimed Jean excitedly, "look what a large family those birds have."

New York's First Railroad

The first railroad in New York state and one of the first passenger railroads in the United States was constructed of wooden rails from Albany to Schenectady, a distance of 17 miles, in 1831. Ten years later the Erie railroad was opened from Piermont to Goshen.

Most Valuable Plant.

No plant renders man greater service than does the wheat, because it supplies to the greater part—and the better part, too—of the western world its staff of life. From wheat the leading nations of the earth obtain their bread.

Some Grownups Have Same Idea.

Miriam had been over to a neighbor's to see the new baby, and on her return I asked her what she thought of it. She replied: "Oh, I don't like 'em so fresh; I like 'em better afterward."

Life's Little Peeves.

Life is just one thing after another, but chiefly it is getting up to do something you have forgotten after being comfortably settled in your chair for work or reading.

For Social Success.

Whenever you see a man who is successful in society, try to discover what makes him pleasing and, if possible, adopt his system.—Beaconsfield.

The Meanest Man.

The meanest man in the world put fishhooks in his change pocket when he took off his trousers at night.

Q. E. D.

It wouldn't be difficult to convince the average man that greenbacks are printed on flypaper.

Daily Thought.

He hears but half who hears one party only.—Aeschylus.

"What's in a Name?"

The French island of Reunion has changed its name four times in 70 years. In 17[illegible] it was Bourbon, as it had been for a century and a half. The revolution changed it to Reunion. Under the empire it became Isle Bonaparte. At the Restoration it reverted to Bourbon. In July, 1848, it became Reunion once more.

History and Material Wealth.

It is [illegible] we remarked that history does not concern herself about material wealth—that the lifeblood of a nation is not that yellow tide which fluctuates in the arteries of trade—that its true revenues are religion, justice, sobriety, magnanimity, and the fair amenities of art.—Lowell.

Got It Printed.

"So, you got your poem printed?" "Yes," replied the author. "I sent the first stanza to the editor of the Correspondence Column with the inquiry, 'Can any one give me the rest of this poem?' Then I sent in the complete poem over another name!"

Practice Cheerfulness.

A sunny, cheerful view of life, resting on truth and fact, co-existing with practical aspiration ever to make things, men and self better than they are—this is the true, healthful poetry of existence.—Robertson.

Really a Cut Price.

Charles had just been vaccinated, and as a reward for his bravery the doctor gave him a quarter. "Thank you for the quarter," said Charles, winking back his tears, "but it was worth a dollar."

Honesty First Requisite.

It would be an unspeakable advantage, both to the public and private; if men would consider that great truth, that no man is wise or safe but he that is honest.—Sir Walter Raleigh.

For Hoarseness.

Hoarseness can be relieved by mixing one teaspoonful of glycerin to the well-beaten white of an egg, the juice of one lemon and enough sugar to make it palatable.

Most Valuable Diamonds.

Diamonds are found with a wide variety of coloring but those that are virtually colorless but which are spoken of as being blue-white are most valuable.

Simple Duty.

What does a man more than his simple duty in coming out for the right? Besides is it any sacrifice to be in the right?—Lowell.

"Gets-It" Peels Off Corns Painlessly

Off They Come Like Banana Skin. 2 or 3 Drops, That's All.

There's a murderous, painful way to get rid of corns, and then there is the peaceful, glorious "Peel-it-off" "Gets-It" way. After you have tried "Gets-It" you will say "never again" to all other methods. This is because "Gets-It" is the only corn-remover on earth that makes corns peel off just like a banana skin. Two or three drops will do the work, without fussing or trouble. You apply it in 1 or 3 seconds. It dries immediately. "Gets-It" does the rest, without bandages, plasters, blood-bringing knives or razors. Get rid of that corn-pain at once, so that you can work and play without corn torture. Be sure to use "Gets-It." It never fails.

"Gets-It," the only sure guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, costs but a trifle at any drug store. Mf'd by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

GETTING THE SAVING HABIT

What Earner of Money Needed Was Simply a Stimulus to Make Economy Attractive.

The following is an account of what competition did toward encouraging a bank account.

"I am on a newspaper. I have always made a salary in excess of simple living requirements, but I was a free spender and did not save.

"A baby came, and I felt an added responsibility. I was afraid—actually frightened for the first time in my life. Then I gave the matter of saving some thought, but I could not decide upon any course of action.

"At the office one day a business discussion made me see that what I needed in my home was competition.

"That night on my arrival home, I said to my wife that I would, beginning the next Saturday, give her half of my salary and I would keep the other half and we each take an equal share of the household expenses.

"At the end of the first month I left my bank book on the library table. I wanted to surprise her. That evening she handed it to me and said she thought I was doing fine. Looking at her closely I saw that she realized she was challenged. She did not speak, however, of any intention she might have had in mind.

"A month later I found her bank book on the library table identically as I had left mine. She had beaten me, for her savings showed $10.50 more than my own for the corresponding month, and $15 in excess of my deposits for the first month.

"We are now in a race. We have enough to buy a home if we should join funds."—American Magazine.

CELEBRATE DAY OF LIBERTY

Festivities of Swiss Cantons to Which All Visitors to the Country Are Attracted.

August 1 is the day when the liberty of the Swiss cantons is celebrated. At Geneva one of the favorite forms of celebration is to throw colored lights on the great fountain of "jet d'eau" that rises out of the lake. Every color of the rainbow plays over the towering column of white spray, washing it in this shining rainbow dress. At night the water seems to float in the air like a many-colored banner. This jet d'eau or jet of water is acknowledged to be the highest fountain in the world. At the place where the waters of Lake Geneva narrow into the harbor, ready to flow into the River Rhone, a small breakwater has been built. Beside it a great water main with a nozzle six inches in diameter is suspended, with the end turned in such a way as to throw the water high in the air. This is done by what is termed "gravity pressure," and the mighty current seems trying to rise as high as the great storage reservoir where it has its source, in the hills east of Geneva.

Tourists and townsfolk walk out on the breakwater to stand beside the fountain and wonder at its mighty roar and its great column of water. When the wind takes the top of the fountain the spray is scattered in some new direction, so that a visit to the fountain, perhaps in a small boat, may mean a wetting. The water falls into the lake with a steady pattering sound.

Relic of Sun Worship.

That the ancient practice of embalming the dead is a religious rite connected with sun worship is the theory advanced by Prof. J. Elliot Smith in a study of the migrations of peoples, published in the Memoirs and Proceedings of the Manchester (England) Philosophical society, a theory that the editor of the Lancet says Professor Smith appears to have proved beyond dispute.

Professor Smith has traced the practice of mummifying into the remotest corners of the earth. In a hot, dry country like Egypt it was easy to preserve a body, but in hot, damp climates it was, in the words of the Lancet, "a very beastly and never very successful business," that could have persisted only as a religious rite. It probably had its origin in Egypt and was spread throughout the world by early missionaries.

Memories of Insects.

Euglenae and practically all microscopic animalculae, even of the most simple nature, have been found to have association of ideas, or, better, associative memory. That is to say by rewards of food and punishment of one sort or another, they learn definite performances. In brief, they associate the act with the consequences. Bedbugs and cockroaches, no less than fleas and plant lice, have been actually trained to obey the whip. Professors Szymanski, Holmes, Bohn, Brundin and Mast are but a few of those zoologists who have studied the "learning process" and behavior of such insects.

Electricity in Surgery.

Modern surgery has called on electricity once more to aid it in relieving human ills. An electric saw for the severing of bones when an amputation or other operation makes so heroic a measure necessary is now the newest instrument in every up-to-date surgeon's office. The advantages of the electric saw over the old hand style saw are, of course, many and obvious. In the matter of time-saving alone it is of the greatest value, and, as is pointed out in the Electrical Experimenter, it saves labor and makes materially for accuracy.

Luminous Paint.

Luminous or phosphorescent paint for clock dials and other surfaces: Heat strontium thiosulphate for 15 minutes over a good Bunsen gas lamp, and then for five minutes over a blast lamp. Or, heat equal parts of strontium carbonate and flowers of sulphur gently for five minutes, then strongly for 25 minutes over a Bunsen lamp; then for five minutes over a blast lamp 5 minutes. Or, precipitate strong aqueous solution of strontium chloride by means of sulphuric acid; dry the precipitate, and heat it to redness for some time in a current of hydrogen; then over a Bunsen lamp for ten minutes, and for 20 minutes over a blast lamp. Mix any of these with pure melted paraffin for use as a paint and expose for a time to sunlight. The two former yield a greenish phosphorescence in the dark, the latter a bluish light.

Odd South African Plant.

A remarkable family of plants are the mesembryanthemums, which are confined chiefly to the dry districts of South Africa. Other curious fleshy-leaved South African plants are the stapelias, which cater for the likes of certain carrion-loving flies, by the simple process of having brown and purple leathery flowers with an unpleasant odor. Some of the most remarkable denizens of the plant world are found in the extensive cactus family. An interesting feature of these plants is found in the wonderful flowers which many of them develop. In some cases these are of immense size and of most brilliant colors. These flowers only bloom for a very short time, and some kinds only open at night.

Self-Discipline.

Marion Crawford had a violent temper as a boy and he decided to get it in hand. One member of his family constantly irritated him to the verge of frenzy, and he invented a form of self-discipline which very few children would have thought of imposing on themselves. His mother entered his room one day and found him walking around it, carrying on his back a heavy wooden shutter which he had lifted off its hinges at the window. "My dear child!" she exclaimed, "what are you doing?" "Getting over a rage," he replied, doggedly, continuing the exercise. "When I am so mad that I want to kill somebody I come in here and carry the shutter three times around the room before I answer them. It is the only way."—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Ovenbird.

Do you know how the ovenbird got its name? Well, it was because its nest built among the leaves or pine needles on the ground is arched and of an oven-like appearance, says the American Forestry association, Washington, which is encouraging bird conservation through bird-house building contests among school children and is conducting a national campaign. You do not see the ovenbird sitting on the topmost twig of a tree like some other members of the feathery tribe, but he sticks close to the ground, mounting to the lower branches of a tree only to sing or to scold an intruder. The song of the ovenbird somewhat resembles the word "teacher."

Odor and Sex Attraction.

Odor seems to be the sex attraction of many animals, and even certain butterflies and moths are found to have scent glands that are more sensitive than human nostrils. Describing in the Naturalist the odors of some English species, J. W. Taylor notes a curious resemblance to the fragrance of common flowers. For example, males of the large garden white butterfly (Pieris brassicae) diffuse a faint but delicious scent of lemon; those of the small Pieris rapae have an aroma of thyme; and those of the green-veined white Pieris napi emit a delicate perfume like that of the lemon verbena. Sweetbrier and honeysuckle are among various other perfumes recognized.

That which is substantial and true in man's will is what we call morality and law; and this is what is divine in the external objects of history. Antigone in Sophocles says: "The divine commands are not of yesterday or today; no, they live without end, and no one knows whence and when they came." Moral laws are not accident, but are reason itself. When these moral laws or ethical principles, which compose the true substance of humanity, have authority in the actions and sentiments of men, when they are really carried out and maintained, then we have the state.—W. F. Hegel.

Simple Courtship.

When a New Guinea woman falls in love with a man she sends a piece of string to his sister, or, if he has no sister, to his mother or another of his lady relatives. Then the lady who receives the string tells the favored man that the particular woman is in love with him. No courting follows, however, for it is considered beneath a New Guinea man's dignity to waste time in such a pursuit. If the man thinks he would like to wed the lady, he meets her alone, and they decide whether to marry or drop the idea.

Real Article Not Recognized.

A theatrical manager was watching his stage manager drill some "supers" who were to represent an army. "Not a bit like it!" he exclaimed. "Why don't you try to look like real soldiers?" The stage manager went up to him and whispered in his ear. "They are real soldiers straight from the barracks!" he said.

LOOKING ON THE SUNNY SIDE

Anything Is Better Than to Give Oneself Over to Pessimism That Will Spoil Everything.

Since we all have more or less misfortune to meet let us strive to meet it in the right way. Why sit down and bewail the ill luck that is ours? Why turn our sorrow over and over in our minds, seeing in it ever new phases of misfortune? No! Let us stand up beneath its weight, no matter how heavy the load may seem, and, with our eyes fixed on the glimmer of light, let us walk swiftly out of the dark paths into the sunlight.

Once we have learned to walk on the sunny side of life darkness will have no further terrors for us, for we will carry our sunshine around with us in the depths of our hearts. The sunshine of the mind is far warmer and brighter than the sunshine which we see and feel with our physical senses.

Once we have gained the true sense of real mental sunshine we will have the means to pull ourselves out of every Slough of Despond without any outside aid. For just as Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress was mental, so it is with all of our journeys through life. What we really accomplish must first be worked out in mind.

Learning to pick out the gleam of light from the dark path, learning how to avoid the sloughs of despond and how to walk in the sunshine is not easy, but even the attempt at learning these lessons brings its reward of happiness and peace. Every little effort in the right direction brings such beautiful returns that the only wonder is that so few of us make the effort.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

LENDING A HELPING HAND

Teamster Gave Handcart Pusher a "Lift" That Was Something to Be Appreciated.

Here is an interesting street scene, drawn by a writer:

The handcart was of a familiar sort—a pair of high wheels with a long platform of slats resting on the axle and a crossbar at one end for a handle. A man stands behind the crossbar and breasts it to propel the vehicle.

The handcart was piled high with big bags filled with waste paper—a cumbersome, heavy load that would have been hard to handle anywhere, and was doubly troublesome going up the slope from Nassau street to Broadway. The handcart man had to bend over the bar and push with all his might to keep the load moving at all.

Coming up behind him was a driver with an empty truck, drawn by a pair of big horses. When the driver saw what was ahead, he started up his team a little and skillfully set the end of the pole square in the middle of the rearmost bag on the handcart, where he could push to the greatest purpose without disturbing the load. Thus the horses began to push the handcart up the hill.

All the handcart man had to do was to stand up, hold on to the handlebar, and keep the handcart straight. The big horses, guided by the friendly driver, were doing the pushing; and so, easily enough, the man got his load up the rest of the slope and round to the easy level of Broadway.—New York Sun.

Dog Helps Man Make Living.

A dog named Rover, owned by a gentleman in Carpenteria, Cal., has been taught to turn the wheel that furnishes the power for his master's scissors-grinding machine. Rover gets on the wheel of his own accord and merrily treads, treads, while his master sharpens scissors and knives. The dog seems to think it a game devised for his special amusement, and when business is slack he will run to the wheel and bark reproachfully at his master until the good man feels obliged to attach the rope which turns the wheel. Rover never seems so happy as when business is brisk, and he can send his large wheel around and around for a whole morning. He will then sleep for half an hour after he has had his dinner, and be ready for work again with his master in the afternoon.—The American Boy.

Flour made from cotton seed is a valuable food for general consumption, and an inexpensive substitute for meat. It is remarkably high in protein, which is the flesh-producing substance of meat, and is readily digested by the gastric juices.

Cottonseed flour is made from the kernel of the seed after the oil has been pressed from it. It is a highly concentrated food and is in no way intended to replace wheat flour or other cereals. It could not safely be used as such because an excess of protein is probably as damaging to the human system as the lack of it. It should be mixed with three or four parts of wheat flour in making into a dough.

Conservation Begins at Home.

The child is our greatest national asset. Conservation should begin at home. Pure, clean food and proper feeding are necessary for the infant. Statistics prove that one breast-fed infant dies to every ten artificially fed. The physician, the midwife and the mother must be taught the necessity of breast feeding. The child must not be deprived of this hereditary right on the least protest. The expectant mother in the last stages of pregnancy should be taught the proper hygiene of this period.

Charleroi Women, Like All Others, Prefer to Select Their Apparel At the Store Where They Are Sure to Find the Largest Assortments.

and it is only natural that there is more satisfaction in making ones selection from an assortment where variety is at its best. The larger stocks can only afford such advantages and can be found only in the larger stores. Here you will find style variety, color variety, material variety, price variety all at their best. And you will find merchandise agreeably priced, somewhat higher in price of course than merchandise of bygone days, but when one considers the high grade qualities, it will be readily seen that this store in reality undersells.

Hundreds of Falls Newest Coat and Suit Styles await Selection for the Wardrobes of particular Women and all are Marked at Prices that are Surprisingly low.

You will be surprised when you see the comprehensive assortment of new garments for Fall and Winter. The racks are overflowing and without a doubt now is the time to select your Coats and Suits for the coming season while you may enjoy the benefits of complete showings.

ASKS DISSOLUTION OF CHARLEROI LAND COMPANY

The Charleroi Land Co., of Charleroi, has filed a petition in the Washington county courts asking for a dissolution, and October 1 1919, has been fixed as a time for a hearing. Joe Chandler is President of the company and William J. Carson is secretary.

Floyd Chalfant formerly of the Mail, now on the editorial staff of the Beaver Times, was a visitor in Charleroi last evening.

MANY FOREIGNERS RETURNING HOME

One feature of the strike noticeable in Clairton, Braddock and Rankin is the large number of foreigners who are leaving for their native land. Platforms at the railroad stations in those towns are reported as being piled high with the luggage of these men, who have decided to return to their former homes across the seas, many of them to remain permanently Many of these men worked in the mills affected by the strike, and they evidently believe that now is the best time to get away from the district

The miners are going to demand a six-hour day, five days a week, and 6 per cent increase in wages. All of which indicates that the ultimate consumer, if he expects to keep warm, will have to put up an additional price for the bituimen.

Gossips act like they are telling something rather remarkable when they say that some married pair 'doesn't get along very well together," but they would be telling something much more remarkable if they'd point out some who always do get along very well together.

CESSPOOL IS THE CAUSE OF COMPLAINT

W A Marshall, of Monongahela, owner of a certain property in Bentleyville, has filed a suit in equity in the Washington county courts against Samuel Levy and W. F. Richardson, both of Bentleyville, to restrain the defendants from maintaining a certain cess pool on the property owned by the defendants. It is averred that such a pool has been constructed in a built-up section of Bentleyville, in order to accommodate the sewage from five living apartments and the store rooms and buildings on the property in question. The same, it is averred, is only a short distance from the property line of the defendant.

DIFFERENT VIEWS ON THE WAGE SCALE

Coal operators who are to meet with the miners' delegates at Buffalo in a conference over the demands for a wage increase and shorter working time, assert that the present scale continues until the close of the war, or until April 1, 1920 Under the circumstances there should be no change according to the agreement already in force, and that any demands for a change should not be made until next spring The miners however insist on action being taken at the present time, as they claim the war is over. In reality this is true, although in a technical seense we may be considered to be at war until there is a declaration of peace. If the miners contend for their view of the situation and call a strike beginning with the first of November, it will have a demoralizing effect on industrial conditions throughout the country.

CAN DESTROY HOUSE IN LINE OF ROAD

Highway Commissioner Lewis B. Sadler has been informed in an opinion by Deputy Attorney General Robert S. Gawthorp that he can move and destroy a house situated on the line of a state highway in Clinton county. The house is within the limits of a relocated highway and is occupied by the owner as a dwelling. Efforts by the County Commissioners to pay damages and secure the removal of the tenant have been unavailing. The highway work has proceeded and a contract let for the work within the lines occupied by the house.

Drawbridge in New Surroundings.

A drawbridge several miles from navigable water may seem entirely uncalled for, says Popular Mechanics Magazine, but such a bridge is used in connection with a southern California warehouse. A spur railroad track runs down the center of the warehouse yard and to save time in unloading, platforms level with the car floor were built on each side of the track Whenever it was desired to get a truck from one platform to another, it was necessary for it to go down off the platform, drive round the block, and go up the incline to the other. This took 10 or 15 minutes of valuable time. The difficulty was eliminated by constructing several small drawbridges over the track. When it is desired to move the train, these are simply lifted up.

Real "Fire King."

Back somewhere in 1830 was a man called M. Chabert better known as "the fire king" and these are some of the things he did to prove himself inhuman and a marvel in London. To begin with, he swallowed 40 grains of phosphorus, which is quite enough to kill two good-sized men, and after that he sipped oil at 330 degrees, and lived long enough to rub a red-hot shovel over his tongue, face and hair, and then lived some more. Some few years later, on a challenge of $250, he repeated the feat, won the wager and threw in a few more like stunts for good measure. He swallowed a piece of burning torch, for instance, and then, costumed in coarse woolens, entered an oven at 380 degrees, sang a song and cooked two dishes of beefsteak.

Oldest Candy in the World.

Most of the black licorice comes from Spain, where it is made from the juice of the plant, and mixed with starch to prevent it from melting in hot weather. The licorice plant is a shrub about three feet high and grows wild where its roots can reach the water. It grows largely on the banks of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. As the valley of the Euphrates contained one of the earliest civilizations in the world, it is probable that licorice is about the oldest confection in the world, and that the taste which boys and girls like so well today was enjoyed by the boys and girls of Babylon and Nineveh three thousand years ago.—Brockton Enterprise.

Sicilian Vespers Remembered.

In Sicily, on Easter Monday, red roses are worn by all, and houses and churches are bedecked with crimson blossoms. This custom has been kept up annually for more than six hundred years, in memory of the great uprising of the islanders against the French known to historians as the Sicilian Vespers massacre. Tradition has it that a bride on her way to church was insulted by drunken soldiers and that in the course of the resultant disturbance, she was accidentally killed, the white roses of which her bridal wreath was composed being stained red by her blood. Hence the custom.
